FANCY COMING TO THE DISCO ON SATURDAY NIGHT

NOT WITH YOU. FOUR EYES. BOYS WHO WEAR GLASSES ARE A REAL TURN OFF!

With less than 24 hours to go until The Disco on Saturday Night, bespectacled Kevin Ross was having difficulty finding a partner.

I WAS WONDERING IF YOU FANCIED COMING TO THE DISCO WITH ME SATURDAY NIGHT?

YEAH! I'D LOVE TO. I'LL MEET YOU OUTSIDE AT EIGHT.

OH NO! NOT THE ONE WITH THE GLASSES. ERM... SORRY, BUT I'VE JUST REMEMBERED—I'M WASHING MY HAIR ON SATURDAY.

IT'S KEVIN... KEVIN ROSS

OH BY THE WAY, WHO IS THIS?

I WAS IN YOUR CLASS LAST YEAR

WELL, THAT'S IT. I'VE TRIED EVERY GIRL IN OUR SCHOOL...

EXCEPT LIZZIE LEIGHTON

BUT SHE'S THE BEST LOOKING GIRL IN TOWN. SHE'D NEVER GO OUT WITH A BOY WHO WEARS SPECTACLES.

THERE'S ONLY ONE THING FOR IT!

I'M GOING TO CALL LIZZIE LEIGHTON. WITHOUT MY SPECTACLES! MAYBE THIS WAY I'LL STAND A CHANCE. I KNOW SHE LIVES ROUND HERE SOMEWHERE.
HI I'M KEVIN. YOU FANCY GOING TO THE DISCO WITH ME ON SATURDAY NIGHT?

YOU'VE GOT THE WRONG DOOR, PAL. NOW PUSH OFF BEFORE I FLATTEN YOUR FACE!

YES, THIS IS HER HOUSE.

I'D LOVE TO! I'LL MEET YOU INSIDE AT ABOUT EIGHT-THIRTY.

On Saturday night at the disco...

IS THAT YOU KEV? I DIDN'T RECOGNISE YOU WITHOUT YOUR GLASSES. ON YOUR OWN AGAIN ARE YOU?

HELLO KEVIN. SORRY I'M A BIT LATE.

YOU WHAT?!

I'M NOT ACTUALLY. I'M WAITING FOR SOMEONE RATHER SPECIAL!

AH, IS THAT YOU LIZZIE DARLING?

LIZZIE? NO. I'M GERTRUDE!

LIZZIE'S STEREOTYPE. FAT, UNATTRACTIVE, UNDER SEXED SISTER. IT WAS ME YOU INVITED TO THE DISCO!

OOPS!

HEH! YOU'RE IN THERE, KEV!

CAN I HAVE SOME MORE CRISPS? I'M HUNGRY!

PERHAPS WEARING GLASSES ISN'T SUCH A BAD IDEA AFTER ALL.
We should all go out and buy some more. I think I haven't seen one for about a quarter of an hour. Mind you, it's hardly enough is it? I mean, the prices these days. Toilet rolls, 3/4 pence for two. That's almost a pound each in the old money.

Of course you never used to have to wait for the buses. The old electric ones were always on time. Not like they are these days.... Oh ho.

And of course, the drivers were a lot more friendly in those days...

Here you are—thirty-two pounds.

Thirty-two pounds. It's ridiculous. You could buy a house with thirty-two pounds when I was your age. Mind you, this has got to last me till Christmas... next year.

Typical. There's never a policeman around when you need one. Not like in the old days...

They used to be ten feet tall, the old bobbies. And they weren't afraid to give you a good clip round the ear!

Oh well. Ticket office.

Time to go home for a nice cuppa.

Well, I'm going all of twenty-five minutes since I last went shopping. I'd better go out and buy some more stuff.

Mind you, the prices these days. It's a wonder how I can manage.

It's a disgrace—a woman of my age having to stand. Of course there was more seats on the old buses.

Eeh, you could go all the way down to the Empire theatre to see Arthur Askey for a ha'penny, and that was a return. They've knocked it down now.

I've come for me pension.

Thanks love.
BRITAIN'S BREEZIEST, BRUISIEST, BLANCMANGIEST LETTERS PAGE

Letterbox is Britain's number one reader's letters page. It's your chance to have your say, air your views and put pen to paper. Let off steam, say your piece and put the record straight by writing to us at 'Letterbox', V/C, Comic, 16 Lily Crescent, Newcastle upon Tyne NE2 2SP. There's usually some sort of payment for every letter we print.

Mrs Thatcher tells us that capital punishment should be restored (it's all well and good punishing people in London, but what about the provinces?). Cities like Manchester, Leeds and Newcastle! Surely this re-introduction of capital punishment would only serve to widen the 'North-South Divide'.

F. Grubblans

When my friend heard on the radio that tickets for her favourite pop group's concert had gone on sale, she rushed out to buy some. It wasn't until she boarded the bus that she realised she was wearing no clothes, and instead of her handbag she had picked up the goldfish bowl on the way out of the house.

Do I get five pounds?

What a con these magazine advertisements are. I have been using Tampax and Tampax for over ten years, and I still can't swim or play tennis.

While working to travel on the bus the other day I overheard two old dears discussing their holidays. "Do you mind?" said one of them. "This happens to be a private conversation".

Mrs E. Talbot Liverpool

I could scream when supercilious people knock on my door. As an old age pensioner it's more than I can stand.

Mrs Elaine Hart Kent

I am sick of people knocking British Rail. I was travelling on the London train the other day when the guard suddenly announced "Next stop Crew'!

How he knew I was getting off there I'll never know, as I had bought my ticket weeks previously. But well done British Rail. Keep it up.

EastEnders tells tributes

As a smooth-talking romance divorce solicitor with extreme financial worries, I find that I can readily identify with the character 'Dirty Den' from the TV's EastEnders.

R. Holmes Bolton

Hasn't it been to Bill Turner's marvellous portrayal of much-troubled Arthur Fowler in TV's EastEnders, that I have never had a nervous breakdown? My wife and I have the odd spot of gardening, and find that I can readily identify with this truly life-like character.

E. Sutton Bishopsfeld

Top marks to the BBC for their wonderfully true-to-life EastEnders drama series. Despite living a remote, anachronistic lifestyle on the fringes of the Sahara desert, I have removed from Western civilisation, I find that I can readily identify with the characters and situations portrayed in this splendid series.

W. Abbi Shingurini Tribe

Can you identify with an EastEnders character? Perhaps you're a teenage prostitute like Mary, a barman like Larry or maybe you have a hot sisters like that in your own local town.

Write to "EastEnders similarities" at the Letterbox address.

It's a dog's life

The sign on the door of our local pub recently announced "OUT OF ORDER—PLEASE USE CAFE OPPOSITE".

Following instructions, my husband entered the cafe and proceeded to use an unoccupied table in the middle of the room, much to the bewilderment of my unsuspecting customers. Of course he hadn't realised that he was supposed to use the TOILETS in the cafe, not the actual cafe itself.

Mrs I. Epachts Erlebnens

My local pub was undergoing extensive redecoration recently when I popped in for a quick pint. After a while I decided to visit the gents. On the door I found a sign which read: "If you are incontinent, or you have been using a latrine. Imagine my surprise when a furscan landlord appeared and promptly ejeem me from the building, knocking three of my teeth out, in the process.

R. Clark Sunderland

Do you have a short story to tell us which contains sentimental humour? Perhaps a friend is involved, or you have been approached by a stranger inside a public toilet. Write and let us know about your "Happy ever After" or "Letterbox, V/C, Comic, 16 Lily Crescent, Newcastle upon Tyne NE2 2SP. There are prizes for every letter we use.

The door to our front house has a wooden door. As well as preventing heat loss, I find it is also a deterrent to would-be burglars.

A. Tenney Shadnfield

I find that by embalming household pets after they have died and selling them in plastic boxes they make ideal craft elders. And it's really is "snooker loopy". So I am sick of people knocking EastEnders.

Mrs I. Epphants Erlebnens

When buying toilet tissue, I always unwind each roll carefully and number the sheets using a biro or felt tipped pen.

Mrs Howard Bingley

At the end of a hard day I find that I am sometimes horizontally on my mattress with the lights switched off and afraid of anyone for tummy for sleep.

Astoundingly brilliant T-SHIRTS

By Ted Shite and Joe Cobblers

His Royal Highness The Prince Of Wales is today faced with the toughest decision of his Royal career. For he must choose between his wife Princess Diana and the new love of his life, outrageous TV presenter Paula Yates.

Sources close to the Prince have confirmed that his six-year marriage to pretty blonde Princess Di is on the rocks. Close friends have spoken of the growing rift between the Royals, and insiders are predicting that the Prince is about to QUIT his Royal estate and move in with leggy blonde Paula whose rocky marriage to Live Aid hero Bob Geldof is said to be on the verge of collapse.

KITTEN

Prince Charles, a keen fan of pop music, is thought to have fallen for saucy Paula, 26, after seeing her on The Pipel TV show. And he is believed to be looking for a flat in the London area — a love nest for Paula and his Prince.

By Roy Dobson

A Royal divorce would doubtlessly score disaster for Charles' career as the next King of England. For his mother, the Queen, is certain to put the stoppers on any attempt to move sexy Paula into the Palace.

In Britain today there are over 15 million people who drive cars. And, like it or not, they all have to park them somewhere.

Yes, car parking is now a part of our everyday lives. Some of us do it all the time, some of us do it less often. Everyday thousands of people park their cars. But how much do you really know about car parking? For instance, did you know...

1. There is room to park over 200 cars on a football pitch. However, if everyone attending the F.A. Cup Final at Wembley Stadium arrived by car it would need an incredible 500 football pitches for them to park their cars.

2. The largest car park in the world is probably in America.

3. If every driver in America decided to park at the same time, there wouldn’t be enough room.

4. Nowadays parking meters accept 10p and 20p coins. In days gone by they accepted only pre-decimal currency. If every parking meter in Britain was placed on top of each other, saving time and money. Many city centre car parks are built with up to 500 parking spaces — enough room for over forty-one dozen cars.

5. Visitors to the Haymarket public house in Newcastle, England, will have no problem finding a parking space. Many customers complained about lack of parking facilities, so the owners decided to demolish the building and replace it with an up-to-date car park.

6. There are now car parks in every town in Britain, enabling drivers to travel anywhere in the UK and park their car when they get there.

7. The first car park was opened in Munich, Germany in 1864. However it remained empty for 21 years until the car was invented in 1885.

8. Modern car parks are now computerised. Electronic signs now flash messages like "SPACES" or "NO SPACES" to indicate to passing motorists whether or not any spaces are available. And modern car park ticket machines can even tell you the time.

9. In Britain up to three parked cars are stolen by unscrupulous 'car thieves' every minute. Enough cars to fill 22 football pitches every day. Hardly surprising when you consider the average parked car is worth over £3,000.

10. Jersey TV detective Jim Bergerac rarely has problems parking his car during the popular BBC TV series. However, in real life actor John Nettles often has difficulty parking in London.

11. In Britain a yellow line along the side of the road means "no parking". A double yellow line means "definitely no parking".

12. Modern 'multi-storey' car parks enable cars to park on top of each other, saving space missions.

13. In America many car parks are fitted with giant cinema screens enabling drivers to watch a film while they park their car. And generous drivers can give their cars a well earned holiday. Special 'motels' have been built — hotels for cars!

14. City centre car parking can be an expensive business, so special 'short stay' car parks exist for drivers who can only afford to park for a few moments. Meanwhile, wealthy motorists can leave their cars in 'long stay' car parks for anything up to 2 years!

15. In Britain today there are over 15 million people who drive cars. And, like it or not, they all have to park them somewhere.

16. In days gone by they accepted only pre-decimal currency. If everyone attending the F.A. Cup Final at Wembley Stadium arrived by car it would need an incredible 500 football pitches for them to park their cars.

17. Modern car parks are now computerised. Electronic signs now flash messages like "SPACES" or "NO SPACES" to indicate to passing motorists whether or not any spaces are available. And modern car park ticket machines can even tell you the time.

18. In the building and replace it with an up-to-date car park.

19. In medieval times castles were built without car parks. People travelled on horses, which they parked in fields or tied up on nearby trees.

20. In medium times there were no car parks.
When most people think of antiques they think of priceless paintings and ornate furniture found only in stately homes or at the local museum. But many of the most interesting and often valuable antiques can usually be found in the most unexpected places.

CURIOS
Perhaps tucked away in the attic or in an old cardboard box underneath the coffee table. Without knowing it, many of us will have fascinating curios and extremely valuable objects lying around the house just waiting to be rediscovered.

PRICELESS
But what do you do if you think you may have found an old master in the wardrobe or a priceless vase tucked away in a corner of your kitchen. How do you find out what it is and how much it is worth?

Our ANTIQUES POSTBOX aims to answer those questions by providing a panel of experts eager to examine any promising artifacts or objects which you think you may have uncovered. Whether it’s gold or silver, china or glass, a painting, a set of crockery or a jewel encrusted grandfather clock, our experts will give it the once over and tell you exactly what it’s worth.

SMALL FEE
Simply pop your antiques in a box and send them to ANTIQUES POSTBOX, Viz Comic, 16 Lily Crescent, Newcastle upon Tyne NE2 2SP, together with a cheque for £75 to cover the valuation fee.

This fancy silver thing is worth a couple of grand
Please note that we cannot accept responsibility for any items lost or damaged in the post.

Hundreds of thousands of brand new motor cars are being stored in gigantic EEC car mountains, we can reveal exclusively.
And many British made cars are being sold to foreigners despite the fact that MILLIONS of people in Britain do not have a car.

SCANDAL
"It’s a scandal", said unemployed Tom Birchall of Middlesborough, who does not have a car.
And while millions of people like Tom do without, boat loads of cars are shipped to America, Australia and other countries. While around Britain, huge quantities of cars are stored in showrooms, warehouses and vast car parks.

DISGRACE
A spokesman for the Rover Group, who makes lots of cars, admitted that they had several hundred cars at their depots around Britain. "We are going to sell them", he told us.

Fulchester MP Mr Derek Twatt told us that the situation was disgraceful. "It’s about time the Government put these cars to some sort of use, helping the unemployed and the many thousands of people who have to walk to work".

We've been swamped by literally almost a dozen entries for our Loch Ness Monster photograph competition! It seems that nearly all our readers have spent the last two months perched on the banks of the loch hoping for a glimpse of the monster. And the results so far are terrific, with even the top experts like David Attenborough completely baffled by your incredible snaps.

"These amazing photographs cast a new light on the mystery of the Loch Ness Monster", said David yesterday. Fellow TV biology expert Dr Jonathan Miller couldn't believe his eyes. "This is certainly a historic day for underwater biology", he told us. "The history books will have to be re-written".

Shown here are some of the most vivid and convincing pictures ever taken of the Loch Ness Monster. If you can do better, send your photos to: Viz Comic Loch Ness Monster Competition, 16 Lily Crescent, Newcastle upon Tyne, NE2 2SP. Every picture we use will win a prize, and the overall winner — the picture which in our view proves beyond all doubt that ‘Nessie’ exists — will win first prize: a Helix Camera Pencil Box. (Please print your name and address clearly on the back of each photograph. Send either colour or black and white).

Fisherman Jock McBraw was lucky to escape uninjured when Nessie emerged from the Loch only feet away from his boat. Quick thinking Jock, of Fort Augustus, Inverness, managed to grab this Polaroid just before the monster disappeared.

Although the object in this picture, taken by Harry Taylor of St. Albans, looks rather like a boat, there are some nice cows in the foreground.

"It was like an enormous baby seal, over 100 feet in length", said Mrs Ivy Tilsdale of Reading, Berkshire, after taking this astonishing picture while on her way home from work in Inverness.

This slightly out of focus picture of Nessie strolling in trees alongside the Loch was taken by Gary, Karen and Donna of Salford.
As you probably know, railways as we know them today are a thing of the past. The first railway was the Liverpool to Manchester canal, running all the way from Stockton to Darlington in Scotland, and back again. This was a special kind of underwater railway built by the railway pioneers (sort of Irish cowboys), and the waterproof "tube" trains which they used featured in the Rev. W. Audrey's Ivor The Engine hooks.

The first steam train was invented almost by accident in 1066 when Charles Darwin, brother of Robert Louis Stephenson, welded several kettles together while burning his cakes in Scotland, earning him the nickname 'The Flying Scotsman'. However it is the Wright brothers who are regarded by most as the fathers of modern railways because of their many 'railway children'. One of them, Casey Jones, died at the wheel of his express train after it struck an iceberg during its maiden voyage to Japan. Many people lost their lives in the accident as discovered by Miss Marples in the film 'Murder On The Orient Express'. It was railway disasters such as this which prompted the famous railway engineer Isambard Kipling Burnett to build several bridges over which trains could travel, the fourth of which is in Scotland.

Nowadays accidents are rare and all train drivers are accompanied by firemen in case of emergency. Sir Arthur Baden-Powell, a notorious 'Great Train Robber' of the nineteenth century, vastly improved railway safety when he invented the semaphore signal, a sort of railway traffic light kept in a cupboard or "signal box".

Faster trains like Henry Ford's 'Rocket' enabled Britain's railway network to grow rapidly, linking the many stations from which people had previously had to walk. Indeed, early stations were primitive affairs, one of which, Kings Cross in London, was named after the then monarch had become annoyed at the lack of facilities available. Other stations also took their names from famous events, such as Waterloo, Cliff Richard's winning entry in the 1973 Eurovision Song Contest, and Liverpool Street, home of Haddington Bear.

Many great advances have been made in railway technology over the years. Most trains now offer dining facilities, hence the expression 'fast food', and British Rail's new Advanced Passenger Train is designed to tilt to one side, making it easier for old people to get on and off at stations. In the future, special long wires will enable electric trains to travel from London all the way to Edinburgh without the plug coming out.

Further information is available to railway enthusiasts (people who prefer trains to buses) from British Rail's new look 'radio stations', including Piccadilly in Manchester, and also from any travel agent or 'ticket inspector' as they are also known.

All other girls had two - but nature had given Petula Plenty an incredible 24 breasts. Here is Part One of her exclusive and frank life story.

'I caused quite a splash in the pool!'

By Petula Plenty

I first began to notice that my body was developing at the tender age of 13. It is an experience that every girl goes through. But I slowly began to realise that I was not the same as all the other girls.

I soon developed a normal healthy bust. But over the next few months I continued to develop. At first I had two breasts. Then three, then four. By the age of 14 I had twelve perfectly formed you-know-whats.

Girls

My schooldays were a nightmare. I was teased by the other girls, jealous of my many attributes, or pestered by inquisitive boys. At the age of 15 I ran away from school, cruel nicknames and taunts about my substantial developments echoing in my ears.

In Bed

That night I lay in bed and cried myself to sleep.

Felt

I decided to see a doctor. I felt lonely and depressed. By this time my number of assets had risen to sixteen. He told me that although uncommon, it was not unusual for a girl my age to be so well endowed.

Friend

This gave my confidence a little boost and I accepted a friends offer when she invited me to go swimming. But I soon ran into problems.

Up

My abundant attributes meant that a normal two piece swim suit was out of the question. I had to buy another SEVEN bikini tops just to cover up my extraordinary assets. As you can imagine, I caused quite a splash in the pool.

I decided to look for a job. But finding work is hard enough if you've got 24 'o' levels, never mind 24 you-know-whats! For by this stage I was fully developed and 24 was indeed how many I'd got.

'It is not unusual for a girl to be so well endowed'

Doctor told me

I got a job working in a lift, pushing all the buttons that make it go up and down. But I dreaded the mornings when men would cram into the lift on their way to work. It was always a tight squeeze, and my considerable developments didn't make closing the doors any easier. The men seemed to enjoy it, but I felt dirty and ashamed.

Bed

I would go home from work tired and emotionally drained, and at nights I would lie in bed and cry myself to sleep.

I had an unpleasant experience at the age of 17. I was being followed by a stranger hoping to inspect my cumbersome credentials. I began to run and so did he. Suddenly I was trapped in a dark alleyway. I thought I was done for.

Revealed

But God must have been watching over me that night, because at that very moment my bra strap snapped and all was revealed! My would-be attacker suffered a massive heart attack and died immediately.

Lay

Despite my good fortune it had been a truly frightening experience, and that night I lay in bed and cried myself to sleep.

Like any girl I enjoy dressing up and buying pretty clothes. But shopping is a nightmare for a girl with so many statistics. I couldn't fit into the fitting room, never mind the clothes. The few dresses which I could buy had to be specially altered so that I could wear them upside-down.

Took Me

Although they had always stared or wolf-whistled at me, I had never had a real boyfriend. That was until I met Peter. He was kind and gentle, and he didn't seem to mind my plentiful proliferations. He took me to the pictures one night and had to pay for three seats. One for him, one for me, and one for my prolific proportions.

Next Week-

How I discovered sex, a woman does her best to seduce me, and my bra snaps again.

Furious toilet cleaner Terry Hutchinson today threw down the gauntlet to Leslie Grantham, star of EastEnders, in the latest episode of a bizarre love battle.

"Come anywhere near my wife and I'll kick your head in". That was the warning from Terry, 49, who fears that his wife Glenda may have fallen for the charms of the actor who plays smooth-talking 'Dirty' Dennis Watts in the TV series. BASTARD

"I could handle that bastard anytime", blasted Terry, a former boxer who weighs in at 18 stone. "He just has to come round here — any time he likes — and we can sort it out, man to man, in the back yard".

It was while drinking heavily at a local pub that Terry first began to suspect something was going on between his 42 year old wife and the well known TV celebrity. But when he arrived home later that evening to confront his wife, she denied ever having met Grantham.

However, a few days later, during an all day drinking session with friends, Terry's suspicions were again aroused and he immediately returned to his home in Bogwater Lane, Burnley, hoping to catch the couple red handed. But he burst into the bedroom only to find his wife was at work, and there was no sign of Grantham in the house.

After watching an episode of EastEnders that evening Terry went drinking with his brother-in-law, before visiting the BBC's studios in West London to confront Grantham face to face. However he was stopped by security guards at the gate, and later arrested for being drunk and disorderly.

"If he comes anywhere near me I'll have 'im", stormed Terry yesterday. "Fancies his chances does he? I'll take the bastard now!" he added.

POLICE

Grantham, who is set to leave EastEnders, was yesterday 'unaware' of Hutchinson's claims. Meanwhile Mr Hutchinson was remanded in police custody awaiting psychiatric reports.

Scandal of the EEC

THOUSANDS of items of garden furniture are being stored in gigantic EEC garden accessory mountains, including barbecues, swing chairs and folding tables.

PATIO DOORS

And we can reveal that many other items, including MILLIONS of miles of carpet are also being stored in vast warehouses and later sold off at low, low prices.

For instance, Galaxy deep shadow pile £8.75 a square yard, Fleetwood foam back shag pile — only £4.50 a square yard. And for the kitchen, Hoover 3348 auto washer — was £289.99 — now only £249.99.

GREENHOUSE

"It's absolute disgrace that the EEC can allow this to happen", said Fulchester MP Derek Twatt. "It's absolute mockery. The Government ought to do something about it".

As long as there has been fruit shops there has been Fruit Shop Humour. Take the pear for instance, a fleshy fruit looking rather like a mis-shapen apple, and sometimes called 'confidence'. "I'd like to get my hands around your ample pear!" A most amusing phrase if delivered by a man over a fruit shop counter to a large-breasted assistant, for it is a peculiarity of the English language that the word 'pear' has two meanings. When spelt aloud it refers to a 'set of two', so in a fruit shop situation our imagination leads us automatically to the assistant's bosom.

MELON

Plums and coconuts are of course the source of endless British belly laughs, resembling as they do the gonads. Ask any greengrocer if you can have a look at his plums and he's bound to see the funny side.

ORGANS

Of course a lot of a fruit shop contents bear no resemblance to the reproductive organs at all. But items such as vegetables are never-the-less often the source of Fruit Shop Humour. For example the leek, a vegetable often associated with Wales, appears in this remarkable joke combining both Toilet and Fruit Shop Humour. "I need a leek", says the customer to the greengrocer. "Don't worry, there's a public toilet on the corner", is his reply.

JOKE

We have organised the British Fruit Shop Humour Awards of 1987 as a celebration of many years of Fruit Shop Humour. And we want you to nominate your favourite fruit shop joke. Simply write your joke on a postcard together with your own name and address and send it to: The British Fruit Shop Humour Awards of 1987, c/o Bob Monkhouse, BBC Television, London.
